"We need organisations and the general public to support our course in helping communities which have no electricity," Mr Gideon Commey, the Founder of Solar People, told the Ghana News Agency in Accra on Friday.

Mr Commey said: "The organisation has the vision to meet consumer energy needs with solar for one person in a community at a time and has, therefore, made commitment to inspire innovation and sustainability.

Mr Commey bemoaned the condition under which school children studied in areas that lacked electricity where they used kerosene lanterns and other unsafe sources of light to study at night.

Besides not having electricity, the school buildings are in a terrible state and require a facelift. Pupils are also in need of educational materials such as books, pens and school uniform.

"We are looking at the Bomba DA JHS in Kansa on the Mampong road in Takoradi, Western Region. The community has no light and pupils use kerosene lanterns. There are about 90 pupils. We have appeals from schools in other electricity deprived areas awaiting intervention," he said.
