Buenos Aires has a quick, efficient and economical public transport system with more than 180 bus lines linking every area of the city and six underground metro (subte) lines, which connect the city's historic political and financial centre with the main avenues, train stations and coach stations.

To travel on public transport, you'll need a SUBE travelcard. You can pick one up from one of our Tourist Assistance Centers, at Subte stations or at many kiosks throughout the city. Simply charge the card with credit and you're ready to travel. To check the best way to get from A to B, download the free app C?mo Llego for your smartphone.

Be sure to check out our suggested itineraries for 24 hours, 48 hours or a week in the city, depending on the length of your stay. These circuits combine the history of Plaza de Mayo, the gastronomy of Puerto Madero, the traditions of the Caminito and the style of Palermo, among other highlights.
