The flagbearer of the governing New Patriotic Party (NPP), Dr Mahamudu Bawumia, has announced plans to spearhead the installation of 50,000 CCTV cameras across Ghana's major towns to enhance security and reduce crime.

He acknowledged that while the government has already begun installing CCTV cameras, not all areas have been covered. This new pledge aims to bridge that gap, providing comprehensive surveillance across key locations.

Former Speaker of Parliament Mike Ocquaye praised Dr Bawumia's intellectual abilities and contributions to the party, referring to his pivotal role in past electoral matters.

Dr Bawumia reiterated the NPP government's commitment to security, economic development, and job creation, highlighting these initiatives as key components of his vision for a prosperous and secure Ghana.
