The ESG (Environmental, Social and Governance) is a set of criteria used to measure a company's responsibility toward environmental, social, and governance issues. The ESG standards cover all policies and actions a company engages in, from product development through the supply chain. Investors use these factors to invest in companies that mirror their values of protecting the environment, corporate governance, and treating people fairly.

Many investors look to invest in companies with a high level of responsibility towards the environment. GES is closely involved with the ESG movement, and all of our solutions are here to help boost your credibility and value in this area.
