Solar grid ghana

Fox News host Tucker Carlson lambasted efforts to pass versions of the "Green New Deal" on his show Tuesday night, claiming that one country's population was "living in the Stone Age" as a result.

"Let's start with Ghana," Carlson said. "Ghana is a pretty little country, peaceful place, actually, on the west coast of Africa. Three years ago, Ghana was in great shape and had one of the fastest growing economies in the world. So much energy over the last decade it was exporting it to its neighbors in West Africa." "What happened next?" Carlson asked. "This is the part you do not read that much about. Last year Ghana experienced a complete shutdown of its national power supply, no more electricity."

"The Ashanti region has millions of people living in it," Carlson said. "They're living in the stone age now. And it is not just the energy grid now compromised in Ghana. International observers say the country is now facing severe food shortages and hunger, starvation within a matter of months."

Carlson noted that Ghana had an Environmental, Social and (Corporate) Governance (ESG) score of 97.7 as the result of embracing a push for organic fertilizers and renewable energy. Some experts claim that a similar reliance on ESG helped wreck the Sri Lankan economy and reduced crop yields, leading to violent protests that forced the country's prime minister and president to resign.

Now that millions of readers are rejecting the increasingly biased and even corrupt corporate media and joining us daily, there are powerful forces lined up to stop us: the old guard of the news media hopes to marginalize us; the big corporate ad agencies want to deprive us of revenue and put us out of business; senators threaten to have our reporters arrested for asking simple questions; the big tech platforms want to limit our ability to communicate with you; and the political party establishments feel threatened by our independence.

We don't complain -- we can't stand complainers -- but we do call it how we see it. We have a fight on our hands, and it's intense. We need your help to smash through the big tech, big media and big government blockade.

We're the insurgent outsiders for a reason: our deep-dive investigations hold the powerful to account. Our original videos undermine their narratives on a daily basis. Even our insistence on having fun infuriates them

-- because we won't bend the knee to political correctness.

One reason we stand apart is because we are not afraid to say we love America. We love her with every fiber of our being, and we think she's worth saving from today's craziness.

A second reason we stand out is the sheer number of honest responsible reporters we have helped train. We have trained so many solid reporters that they now hold prominent positions at publications across the political spectrum. Hear a rare reasonable voice at a place like CNN? There's a good chance they were trained at Daily Caller. Same goes for the numerous Daily Caller alumni dominating the news coverage at outlets such as Fox News, Newsmax, Daily Wire and many others.

Simply put, America needs solid reporters fighting to tell the truth or we will never have honest elections or a fair system. We are working tirelessly to make that happen and we are making a difference.

Since 2010, The Daily Caller has grown immensely. We're in the halls of Congress. We're in the Oval Office. And we're in up to 20 million homes every single month. That's 20 million Americans like you who are impossible to ignore.
